These paintings come from painting trips to the east coast of Tasmania, and locally to South Arm and to Geilston Bay. I've been to these places regularly but there is always something new to paint even if only by moving my easel a few feet. In many ways that's when the paintings are just beginning.

In the studio I spend many hours reinterpreting these paintings seeing where they might lead. Some of these paintings remain true to the original image while others take on a life of their own.

My enduring fascination with the possibilities of colour, shape and line often lead me in quite different directions from where I started.
