Now

These paintings have come together while there has been so much upheaval in the world, the land is under the strain of extreme weather changes creating wildfires, floods and drought, innocent people caught up in wars.

Nature is a perennial survivor, and it gives me inspiration for my art, collaborating with colour to explore possibilities.

The painting The Struggle for Freedom is a direct response to the genocide in Gaza, particularly the dead and maimed children we have witnessed from the safety of our own homes. I have felt helpless watching this cruelty unfold; I wanted the painting to show nobility and strength in all struggles for freedom.

Since turning three quarters of a century, I have also delved into a little nostalgia with some work; places from my past and revisiting significant memories.
