

nick glade-wright—

celebrating national tree day

---

Water in my Veins

This painting is an optimistic expression of survival in a world facing dark times due to the demise of environmental integrity due to global warming.

The boab, with its eccentric shape and branches like human veins or tributaries of a river system has survived for millennia and has been an integral aspect of spiritual significance to indigenous peoples of Australia.

The tree has great capacity to retain vast amounts of water and contains many medicinal properties. It is a sign of hope for the world's future. Here it is sharing its knowledge of resilience.